Preface

Most American genealogies begin with some remote ancestor, generally the first one of the name who came to America, and trace downward to the present time the diverging lines of his posterity, generally omitting the descendants of daughters, as they bear other names. Young people of this time are found in about the eighth, ninth or tenth generation from the first settlers, or immigrant ancestors, of the New England and other colonies.

This book exactly reverses the above method. It begins with the author's children and traces their ancestry on all ascending lines, female as well as male, back eight, nine or ten generations, back to the first settlers of New England, and as much further as possible, back into England.

The disadvantage of this plan is that the author has to put himself and his family in the front of the book, but it enables him to give, with pleasure, a prominent place, so well deserved, to his parents and the parents of his wife.

The great advantage of the plan is that it gives all of one's direct ancestors, on all lines, female as well as male, as far as they can be traced, and gives them in the natural order of interest, as we are naturally more interested in the near-by generations than we are in the remote ones. This plan gives ancestors of about one hundred and fifty different surnames, mostly of New England families. The common plan gives one a host of distant cousins that bear the family name; this plan gives one his direct ancestors, bearing many names, and a host of great and very great uncles and aunts, whose connection with other families is indicated by telling whom they married.

The desire, however, to know about one's cousins of near degree is gratified by giving all the descendants, as far as they can be traced, to the last baby born, of the grandparents of the writer and his wife. This last feature has involved a large correspondence, lasting for years. Only a few persons have declined to answer letters.

Essay on Genealogy

I was visiting a city school one day, and in answering some question about the Pilgrims that had been referred to me, I asked the scholars how many of them knew the meaning of the word Genealogy. One hand went up and its owner, a boy of about twelve, said: "It—it, why, it is to find out about your great uncle, what relation he is to you." But it is hardly so simple a thing as that. Genealogy is defined as the science of births. In the study of it we search out our ancestors and find out all we can about them. We disentangle the threads that center in ourselves, or in our children, and follow each one backward, the number of threads doubling with each generation. Or we go back to some ancestor, say one who came to New England nearly three hundred years ago, and note and record the diverging lines and the increasing progeny that came from that ancestor, until it becomes a great host, allied and interwoven with countless other families.

Is it an interesting study? Yes, exceedingly so—if one is interested; otherwise it is exceedingly dry. Pardon a bit of personal experience. In 1874 I happened to be in Methuen, Mass. In the town clerk's office I copied the names of about one hundred Crosses. I sent them to my brother, the late Capt. Judson N. Cross of Minneapolis. He pursued the study with enthusiasm until his death in 1901, and often sent to me the results of his work. I glanced them over and put them away, intending sometime to put them in shape for my children. Many years passed and it was not done.

The impulse to do it came at last from a visit to New England in 1906, when my wife visited her ancestral home in Rhode Island and found it turned into a city park for Pawtucket, with the house, over two hundred years old, filled with colonial relics by the D. A. R. I visited my mother's birthplace up on the green hills of Vermont, and found trees forty feet high growing out of the cellar of the old home. Returning to Denver we tried to verify a report we had heard that my wife was descended from John Alden. We failed to prove it true, but the effort gave us a start in genealogical study, and until her death in September, 1910, we pursued the study together, I in odd moments as a recreation, she as a relief to the nervous strain of a long illness. We became genealogical enthusiasts. We found it a delightful study and one of absorbing interest. We made many discoveries about our ancestors and their friends.

Back in the past few centuries, winding among the hills and along the streams of old New England, diverging lines of ancestors rose from their graves, as it were, and told us their names, where they lived, their occupations, their deeds and misdeeds, whom they married and when, the names of their children and whom they married, with little incidents or thrilling stories that were caught in the amber of history, with records of economy and of patriotic heroism as they subdued the stony soil of New England and cleared her forests, fought savages and threw off the galling yoke of the mother country. We became acquainted with them; we introduced them to our children and our cousins, and we prepared for them letters of introduction to our children's children and to the far-off generations of the future. And those letters of introduction make up this book.

Genealogy is a biblical study. What precious records of a far-distant past the Bible has preserved for us! How careful the inspired writers are to trace Christ's ancestry back to David, to Abraham, to Adam, yea, to God! Luke's genealogy of Christ closes thus: "the son of Enos, the son of Seth, the son of Adam, the son of God."

Genealogy is a study of great intellectual value. It might well be made an elective in the college curriculum. It gives us the benefit that we get from the study of history, mingled with the fascinating interest of biography and of the study of old-time customs and institutions. It gives us difficult problems to solve, such as tax our intellectual powers, sometimes problems that we work upon for years. How exciting the chase becomes, and with what a triumphant thrill of joy we grasp the solution at last! Such a problem is the Cross problem, one of great difficulty, not yet solved, except provisionally, though many genealogists have worked upon it. See its discussion in Appendix J. Such a problem was the Murdock problem, upon which my brother worked for years. Five years after his death I chanced upon a two-line query in an old genealogical magazine. I put this and that together in my mind, wrote to the pastor of a New England church, who copied for me a birth date from the town records, sent it to me, and lo! I had the solution, and traced the line at once back to Robert Murdock, who came from Scotland about 1680. Far and wide I sent a mimeograph copy of the pedigree to the Murdock clan. Some of them rejoiced with me over the lost ancestors that were found, and some paid no attention to the matter, not even thanking me for my trouble.

The study of Genealogy is a duty that we owe to our ancestors. We would be ashamed not to know the names of our parents. We ought to be one-half as much ashamed not to know the names of our grandparents, and of some other ancestors. We ought to rescue their names from oblivion and cause them to live again in the present. Most of them were obscure men and women and, unless we mention their names and recall their lives, it is not probable that any one else will do it. Their grave stones, if they have any, will crumble to dust, perhaps have done so already. If anywhere we can find any records of their lives, let us collect them, put them in shape and hand them down to posterity. Thucydides, 400 B. C., said: "Both justice and decency require that we should bestow on our forefathers an honorable remembrance." Daniel Webster said: "Those who are regardless of their ancestors do not perform their duty to the world."

Many of our ancestors were pioneers in a new country. They subdued the land. Some were private soldiers who fought Indians and helped to gain, or to preserve our country's independence. They wrought nobly, and we should see that they have credit for what they did.

"Beneath the roots of tangled weeds,
Afar in country graveyards lie
The men whose unrecorded deeds
Have stamped this nation's destiny.
We praise the present stock and man,
But have we ever thought to praise
The strong, still, humble lives that ran
The deep-cut channels of those days?
Beneath those tottering slabs of slate,
Whose tribute moss and mould efface,
Sleeps the calm dust that made us great,
The true substratum of our race."

Genealogical study is also a duty that we owe to ourselves. An old adage says: "Know thyself." We cannot fully know ourselves unless we know the ancestral factors that enter into our makeup. Each of us is a bundle of ancestral traits. Ancestral study is a dissection of ourselves. As a nation owes it to itself, and the human race likewise, to study its past history, so the individual owes it to himself to study his ancestral past as far as he can reasonably trace it. What is known as Galton's Law says: "Of the total inheritance of any living being,—plant, animal or man,—each parent has contributed a quarter, each grandparent a sixteenth, each great-grandparent a sixty-fourth, and so on, while the influence of each generation is just equal to that of all the generations preceding it." It is said that this law holds good in ninety per cent of the royal families of Europe.

It is also a duty that we owe to posterity. It is not right for me to keep my children in ignorance of my parents, of their good qualities, their achievements and the striking incidents of their lives. What would I think of my nephew if he never told his children how his father, my elder brother, fought and was sorely wounded in the Civil War, and should never show them the sword that he wore in battle, but should hide it in the garret or sell it for old iron? Doing thus he would be unworthy to bear his father's name, or to transmit it to others. He would be cheating his children out of an important part of their education. None of us should be non-conductors of ancestral lore. The least that we can do, in justice to ancestors and posterity, is to gather and pass on the ancestral names, dates of birth, marriage and death, and where they lived.

It is possible that in the future a great character may arise in our line, one who will reflect glory back on his ancestors. He and others will naturally wish to know who his ancestors were. When Lincoln died he knew only the last part of the following statement: Samuel Lincoln came from England to Hingham, Mass., as a pioneer in 1637; his son Mordacai went as a pioneer to Scituate; his son Mordacai went as a pioneer to New Jersey and Pennsylvania; his son John went as a pioneer to Virginia; his son Abraham went as a pioneer to Kentucky and was killed by Indians; his son Thomas went as a pioneer to Indiana, and his son Abraham went as a pioneer to Illinois, then to the White House and to immortal fame.

It is the duty of every person, especially of those who have children, to prepare and leave a short sketch of his own life, with the main dates and facts. How often at funerals do ministers find the friends, and even the children, grossly ignorant of the facts concerning their dead! Especially should old soldiers leave a full record of their own war history. The time will come when such records will have great value, even though they are not printed.

More people now than ever before are interested in ancestral study, owing largely to the desire to join the patriotic societies. I venture a few simple suggestions to those who wish to trace their ancestry:

1. Personally interview or write to parents, grandparents, uncles and aunts, great uncles and great aunts, and other relatives, for full names, exact dates of births, marriages and deaths, lists of children, removals, trades, professions, interesting incidents, war records, family traditions, etc.

2. If you have access to them, consult family records in old Bibles, wills, deeds and church, court and town records. Many New England towns have published their Vital Records. Many also have published town histories that contain genealogies of the early settlers.

3. Consult family genealogies, if you can find or hear of any in your line. Thousands of them have been published and are to be found in private families or in public libraries, especially in historical and genealogical libraries. In such libraries you will also find Savage's Genealogical Dictionary for New England, the sixty or more volumes of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, lists of Revolutionary soldiers, biographies, and a host of other books in which are hidden facts that you wish to find.

4. Write to other members of your line, or to prominent persons of your name, and inquire what they know about the common ancestors. Some of them will not answer your letters; others will give you gratis most valuable information which you can pass on to others at the same price.

5. If you can afford it, you can get, at a reasonable price, the services of genealogical experts who have access to the great genealogical libraries of the country, like those in Salem, Boston, Albany, New York, Washington, Chicago, etc. They know exactly where to look for what you want and how to go at difficult problems.

6. When you get a few facts begin to put them in shape in some sort of chart or table. The charts used in this book are simple, easily understood and easily prepared. When the chart, or table, or tree, is about as complete as you can make it, write out or get printed enough copies for each of your children, if not also for each grandchild and each brother and sister.

In the study of ancestry one is liable to find some disagreeable facts. In New England a person's serious, and sometimes his trivial, misdeeds were quite apt to be put down in church or court records. My children's ancestors were, for the most part, good, honest, God-fearing Puritans, yet some of them did wrong things, or things that we call wrong. One was fined twenty shillings for telling "two lies." One was sued for slander for spreading the report that her neighbor was a witch. One, a good Baptist deacon, kept an "ordinary," or tavern, and sold liquor; in fact several of them did. It was not regarded as wrong then. One was a Tory. One was charged with murder, but was acquitted. Some of them did kill men in battle, but that is another story. Among the live stock of one was listed a negro valued at £6, and a negro boy valued at £25. If one can trace his ancestry, as my children can, back to the royal families of Europe, he will find plenty of "titled scoundrels," as John Adams called them. One has far more reason to be proud, as John Adams was, of descent from the plain and humble pioneer farmers of New England.

What hardships those pioneers endured, as pioneers generally do! What hard work was theirs in cutting down forests, clearing the land of stones, making roads, draining swamps, and building homes, while for two generations or more the very air pulsed with the fear of Indians! One who is familiar with New England history can read many thrilling experiences between the dates found in this book.

In spite of poverty and hardships, of wild beasts and savage foes, they built churches and started colleges and reared splendid families. They neither believed in nor practiced race suicide. Their imprint is on this great nation, especially on its northern half, in that New England zone that reaches from the Atlantic to the Pacific. My wife and I were very grateful that we could trace our children's ancestry, on every diverging line, back to the first settlers of New England, and on many lines back to the sturdy yeomen and Godly Puritans of old England. It is a prized heritage that we gladly pass on to coming generations.

EXPLANATION.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Cross are given first. They constitute the first generation, counting backward. Their parents are given next, as the second generation. The parents of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Cross are the third generation. For each one of them, Rev. and Mrs. Gorham Cross, Rev. and Mrs. Lewis Bridgman, an ancestral chart is given, followed by data concerning the ancestors given on the chart, and others further back than the chart goes, which is to the ninth generation. Each space in the chart is numbered, even the spaces for ancestors about whom nothing is known as yet. The data for each ancestor are given under his or her number on the pages following the chart, the numbers for husband and wife being placed together.

Thus the main part of the book is composed of four sections. The Cross Line, the Murdock Line, the Bridgman Line and the Daggett Line. The numbers for similar spaces in the charts are the same in each section. For example, the eight great grandparents of each of the four persons in the third generation are numbered from ten to seventeen, while each one of those four persons at the bottom of the chart has the number three. They are distinguished from each other, when necessary, by using at the head of the page, or elsewhere, the name or initials of the line, as Cross Line, or C. L., Daggett Line, or D. L. After the third generation the even numbers indicate male ancestors, the odd numbers female ancestors. If one is reading the data of one ancestor and wishes to turn at once to that ancestor's father and mother without referring first to the chart, he can multiply the ancestor's number by two and then subtract two for the father and one for the mother. Reverse the process if you wish to find at once the number of an ancestor's child. The reason for this will be seen by consulting the chart.

A few blank pages are left at the end of the book, on which the owner of the book can write any data that are discovered later. Such data can be given after the number of the ancestor whom they concern. If more blank pages are needed they can be inserted. If the author's life is spared and he discovers many new facts he hopes to get them printed, together with corrections of errors, in a supplement to this book. Readers are urged to send to him corrections of any errors that they find in the book.

If no state is mentioned after the name of a town, Massachusetts is understood. The state name is also omitted after well-known cities.

In lists of children, and elsewhere, the name that is printed in italics or small capitals is the name of an ancestor. In a few cases there are two ancestors in the same list of children.

Undoubtedly there are mistakes in this book. It is safe to say that a genealogy without mistakes has never yet been prepared or printed. The author has taken great pains to avoid them, both in the preparation and in the printing of the book. In many cases he has found two different dates for a birth, marriage or death, and in some cases he gives both of them. These different dates are often caused by confounding a birth with a baptism, a marriage with the publication of the banns, or a death with a burial. The plan of the book does not admit the giving of authorities for every fact. The author has consulted libraries in Denver, Chicago, Cleveland, Albany and Boston, besides an extensive correspondence for nearly seven years.

When they are known a full list of an ancestor's children is given, with brief data concerning them. Thus we get a long list of great and very great uncles and aunts. Naturally more data are available, and more are generally given, about the nearer generations. Exceptions to this are found among the immigrant ancestors, the first settlers of New England, all the facts concerning whom are of great interest.

Nov. 18, 1865, he became engaged to Emma Asenath Bridgman, to whom he was married Aug. 12, 1869, and with whom he lived most happily until her death forty-one years later.

EMMA ASENATH BRIDGMAN, b. Saturday, Dec. 2, 1843, at Wauwatosa, Wisconsin Territory, now a suburb of Milwaukee, resided at different places in Wisconsin, where her father preached, at West Hawley, Mass., 1857-58, and at Middlefield, 1859-63; studied at Holyoke Seminary 1862-63, and at Oberlin parts of 1863-64-65, in the class of 1866. In Nov., 1865, she went south under the American Missionary Association to teach the recently liberated slaves, and helped start what is now the Ballard Normal School at Macon, Ga. The war had closed so recently that things were still in a chaotic condition in the south. The northern teachers were called N. T.'s, and were treated with contempt by many of the white women, even when they attended church. Some of the pupils at that time became leaders of their race in after years. One of them is a college professor, author and LL. D. Miss Bridgman returned north in 1866 and afterwards taught school in Wisconsin and in Lansing, Ia., in all about seven terms. She was married Thursday, Aug. 12, 1869, to Roselle Theodore Cross, at De Soto, Wis., on the Mississippi River, about half way between Prairie du Chien and La Crosse. Her father, Rev. Lewis Bridgman, officiated, assisted by Rev. Gorham Cross. They took a steamer that was twelve hours late, visited Mr. Cross's sisters at Tama and Lyons, Ia., and his brother at Cleveland. They boarded in Oberlin three months and then rented the old Prof. Hudson place on So. Professor St., which Mr. Cross afterwards bought. They had first met and become engaged at Oberlin, where her parents first met, and where her youngest son met his wife.

After they left Oberlin she shared her husband's labors in his different pastorates. She was a very tactful, helpful and much beloved pastor's wife. She was active in Sunday School work, especially in teaching primary classes. In West Denver she had a class that at times numbered nearly one hundred. In York she taught the primary class several years. In West Denver she was president of the Martha and Mary Society. She was greatly interested in missionary work and had a happy faculty of getting others interested. She took Life and Light and Mission Studies from their first publication. She was daughter, daughter-in-law, wife and mother of Congregational ministers. She well knew the trials and the joys of a minister's life, on the frontier and in large cities. On her journey to Colorado in 1876 she buried her mother and her two boys, an experience that she bore with great courage and submission. In Colorado two more boys were given her.

At one time or another she visited many parts of the country. In 1903, on their way to Florida, she took great pleasure in visiting the school at Macon, which she had helped to start, and in showing it to her husband. In 1904 she spent nearly six months at Portland, Oregon, and at the beach near the mouth of the Columbia. In 1906 she and her husband visited their two sons in the East. In 1909 they spent a most delightful two months in the East, visiting ancestral homes in New England for nearly two weeks, going to Boston, Plymouth, The Thousand Islands, Saratoga, Niagara Falls, and other places, visiting their children, including two grandchildren whom they had not before seen, and taking their families to Richville, N. Y., for a reunion in the old home where Mr. Cross's father had lived more than half a century. The whole trip gave Mrs. Cross very great pleasure. She was never very strong and during the last four or five years of her life she was under the care of a specialist. At Ft. Collins she could do but little church work. In the spring of 1910 she grew worse and, by advice of physicians, she was taken to a lower altitude in June, to her son's home in Cleveland. She continued to fail and died Sunday evening, Sept. 11, 1910. She was buried at Oberlin, Sept. 13. At the grave, Dr. J. G. Fraser, Mr. Cross's college classmate, spoke in substance as follows:

"The life of Mrs. Cross may be fitly described as an ideal Oberlin life. Its ancestry was from the 'seven pillars' of that Northampton church which had Jonathan Edwards for its pastor, whose name is still perpetuated in the name of the Edwards Church, with a Bridgman today for its clerk. Her father, Lewis Bridgman, was of that band of Lane Seminary 'rebels,' which set its lasting impress so early on Oberlin. Her mother was a teacher of the colored people at Columbus. Mrs. Cross was naturally of the strong, serious, thoughtful type of the Oberlin of forty-five years ago, of fit stock to be the daughter, the wife, and the mother of Congregational ministers. During her school life she formed the attachment which led to the long life of perfect union, in sorrow and service and mutual love, of an ideal home. A natural part of this ideal Oberlin life was the teaching, after leaving Oberlin, in the newly opened school for the freedmen at Macon, Ga., which she helped to start in 1865-66. With marriage came life for some years at Oberlin, while her husband was a member of the faculty, membership in the First Church, a place in its choir, the care of little children in its Sunday School. Then there was that quiet, ceaseless, tireless, unrecognized service for so many years as a pastor's wife; so completely the making or the marring of the minister, and yet so little seen or recognized.

"And this ideal typical Oberlin life fitly ends with this homecoming for burial. This cemetery is rich in great names; increasingly rich with the years, more and more to be a place of world pilgrimage; but there is no more precious or worthy dust here than that of the faithful men who have served and died in the world's hard and humble places; and still more, and most of all, of the beloved and devoted wives who have rendered such loyal service to home and church and the Kingdom of God.

"No clay is more precious, or brings more honor to this place, than that we now lay away, just where she and Mr. Cross and other students, on a holiday granted the students for that purpose in 1864, forty-six years ago this summer, helped in first preparing this place, so beautiful and historic today."

The following very brief extracts are from a few of the many tributes to her memory: "What a noble life!", "No finer character ever lived," "A rare life of devotion and service," "A shining example of perfect womanhood," "An ideal sister of our Lord," "An unusually useful life," "A blessing to all who knew her." "I dearly loved her sweet, quiet, womanly ways," "Her sweet nature was a great charm in her," "The personification of patience and discretion," "No woman in all our acquaintance had a closer place in our hearts from the time we first met her," "A noble, faithful, Christian woman, who as wife and mother was worthy of love and honor."

GENERATION III—CROSS LINE.

3. REV. GORHAM CROSS, b. Tuesday, Oct. 4, 1808, at Goffstown, N. H., youngest of ten children; lived at Weare, N. H., from age of two and a half years to twelve. When about seven he met a bear in the woods near home; when about nine a brother rescued him from drowning in the mill pond, and a year later he came near dying of fever. In the fall of 1820 he moved with his parents to Jefferson Co., N. Y. In 1824 he came under the influence of Charles G. Finney, then a young evangelist preaching in country places, afterwards president of Oberlin College. In his autobiography, and often in sermons, he mentioned Mr. Cross in connection with the famous scene in the schoolroom in the district called "Sodom." Gorham worked summers and went to that log schoolhouse winters; was sick nearly two years from overwork, and studied all the harder to prepare to teach. When twenty he taught in a log schoolhouse near Sterlingville, N. Y., for ten dollars per month and "boarded round."

In 1829 he visited New Hampshire and Boston; in 1829-30 he taught at Le Roy, N. Y., and had a great "exhibition." Three of his pupils that winter became lawyers and two became ministers.

In 1830 he studied awhile in the academy at Gouverneur, N. Y.; then entered Judge Dodge's office in Gouverneur to study law; conducted several lawsuits that winter, and worked on his father's farm in the summer of 1831.

In 1830 Sophia Murdock taught in his home district. He met her at church, became interested, called on her several times, and at the close of her school took her to Gouverneur to her brother's, Dr. Hiram Murdock. Sept. 13, 1831, they were married at Utica, N. Y., by Rev. Dr. Lansing, the groom having then fifteen dollars and a new suit of clothes that was spun, woyen and made at home. Leaving his wife at her sister's near Utica, he returned home and three weeks later was converted under the preaching of Rev. Lewis Wicks, in whose published life Mr. Cross is often mentioned. Feeling that he must preach, he made the first effort about Dec. 1, 1831. In Jan., 1832, he brought his wife home and in February joined the church at Antwerp nearby; moved to Philadelphia village, N. Y., where his first child was born; worked in his brother John's store, and on his brother-in-law Nurse's farm at Frankfort, N. Y.; taught winters; bought a compass and began to survey, which he did occasionally in after years; took a small contract of grading on the N. Y. Central R. R., then being built; moved back to Philadelphia and worked at farming, surveying and clerking; was town inspector of schools in 1837; taught his last school in 1838-39; was licensed to preach Aug. 20, 1839, at Carthage, N. Y.

In May, 1839, he went horseback, an entire stranger, to Richville, in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., where he was soon engaged to preach at $80 per year for half the time. He moved his family there in the spring of 1840. He was ordained by the Black River Association of Congregational churches at Turin, N. Y., June 6, 1840. He preached half the time at Richville for almost forty years, and lived there fifty-five years, except from April, 1849, to Sept., 1852, when he lived at Rensselaer Falls, twelve miles north, still preaching half the time at Richville. At different times he preached half the time at Rensselaer Falls, Hermon, Dekalb, Depeyster, etc.

He was engaged often and successfully in revivals, alone, or with Evangelist Wicks, or other ministers. In the fall of 1841 he and his wife and daughter Amelia visited Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, going with horse and buggy. In attending over 600 funerals and weddings he was never kept from his engagements but once. He early became interested in the temperance and anti-slavery causes and warmly supported both. He became well known all over northern New York.

"In many homes an honored guest,
To many hearts endeared,
Well known to old, well known to young,
And by them all revered."

In 1869 he and his wife took their first trip West, talking over old times with President Finney at Oberlin, attending the wedding of their son Roselle, and visiting children, sisters and other friends. They went again in 1872. In 1873 his wife died, the first death in the family since they were married forty-two years before.

Nov. 20, 1877, he married (2) Mrs. Annie McCuaig, widow of Joseph T. McCuaig of Ottawa, Canada, daughter of Judge Haile of Plattsburg, N. Y., with whom he lived happily until her death, Feb. 28, 1885. She was born in Dec., 1832. Her sons, William, Joseph and James, were present when she died. In 1881, and again in 1889, he visited his children in Minneapolis. After a brief illness he died in his old home at Richville, May 10, 1895, aged 86 years and 7 months, and was buried in the old cemetery, between his two wives. He preached at intervals up to the time of his death. April 17, 1890, the Richville church and community celebrated the 50th anniversary of his coming to Richville. A public meeting was held, speeches made, letters and telegrams read, and a goodly sum of money presented. The proceedings and letters, with a sketch of his life, were published in pamphlet form, which see.

GENERATION III—MURDOCK LINE.

3. SOPHIA MURDOCK, b. in Townshend, Vt., Sunday, Nov. 5, 1809; d. at Richville, N. Y., Saturday, May 31, 1873, age 62 years and 7 months. At the age of fifteen she removed with her eldest sister, Mrs. Sally Nurse, to Frankfort, near Utica, N. Y. From Troy they made the journey in a packet boat on the Erie Canal, which was then new. In 1829 she and her brother Alvah, made that distance in three and a half days. By rail it is now made in less than that many hours. The next year after going to Frankfort she "experienced religion," an expression much used in those days. When twenty-one she united with the Baptist church in Utica, and soon after, in 1830, went to Gouverneur, N. Y., where her eldest brother, Dr. Hiram Murdock, was practicing medicine. There she attended the academy and taught school about one year. She was married Sept. 13, 1831, to Gorham Cross, whom she had met the previous year while teaching in his father's district. After marriage she lived in Philadelphia, N. Y., Frankfort, near Utica, Philadelphia again, and Pogueland, then at Richville, N. Y., from 1840 until her death, except three years, 1849-52, at Rensselaer Falls, N. Y. See C. L. 3.

A few months before her death she wrote that when her children were young she prayed that she and her husband might be spared until the children were grown. Seven children were born to them and all were living at her death in 1873, and also when the father died in 1895. All were born in the first half, and all lived through the second half, of the nineteenth century.

In her home she generally did all the work of the household, except as the children helped when they were large enough. The writer well remembers seeing her cook and bake in an old-fashioned fireplace and bake oven, spin with an old-fashioned spinning wheel, knit stockings while reading, weave rag carpets in a home-made portable loom, quilt "comforters," make tallow candles, do big washings and ironings, make clothes for the family, and do other things that not many women do now. He also well remembers the look of peace upon her face when she came each morning from her place of secret prayer. On a small salary she kept her home and children looking clean and neat, and also entertained much company, especially ministers. One of those who came occasionally was President Grover Cleveland's father, who used to tell of a boy he had who was good at breaking up hornets' nests. She attended church regularly, usually twice each Sunday, and in her later years taught a large class of young ladies in the Sunday School. When her husband was absent from home, which was generally over every other Sunday, she faithfully kept up the family altar. Some of her children remember the earnest prayers that she offered by their bedside, in the dark, stealing quietly into their room on the night before they first left home to go to Oberlin College.

When her children began to attend the common school she helped them in their studies as far as she could, and then rejoiced if they could go beyond what she had learned. When they were all gone from home she enjoyed a fuller return to her early tastes for art, reading, and even study. She had a strong love for beautiful things, especially flowers, pictures and crystals. In leisure moments she wrought many artistic things, some of which took prizes at the fairs. She encouraged her children to get a good education. Six of them studied at Oberlin and three graduated. They all taught school, as had both parents. A year before her death, in 1872, she made a long visit to her children in Iowa and Ohio, a visit that she greatly enjoyed. Soon after that her health failed. In May, 1873, her children came from Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Michigan and were with her and took entire care of her from one to two weeks before her death. Her two living brothers ministered to her as physicians. She died at daybreak, May 31, 1873.

"Dying, still slowly dying,
As the hours of night rode by,
She had lain since the light of sunset
Was red in the evening sky,
Till after the midnight watches,
As we softly near her trod,
When her soul from its prison fetters
Was loosed by the hand of God."

The following words are from a tribute which her husband paid to her memory years after her death: "She was a great help to me in the church work and ministry at Richville. She was always popular with young and old. She enjoyed young people and always entered heartily into their plans for amusements. She encouraged young people to get an education. She made the most of our scanty salary and cheerfully made it go as far as possible. She was trustful, economical and an earnest and honest believer in constant prayer and appeals to Him on whom was our entire trust. She was discreet in all she did at home and in the church. She never committed herself to any one until her judgment approved. She was in full sympathy with all the great missionary movements. In the thirty-three years that she lived at Richville (and Rensselaer Falls) I never heard of anything being said against her. She unconsciously was the leader in church matters, in the Sabbath School, and in her social sphere. She was modest, unassuming, and disliked discord. She was never superstitious and never called narrow-minded as to other denominations. She did her part nobly, faithfully, grandly. She was so nearly perfect as a wife, a mother, a friend, a poor minister's helpmeet and constant counselor, that I cannot conceive of a woman better fitted by all the gifts and graces of a pure Christian womanhood to bear the labor and do the work and be patient under the frequent discouragements, as a pastor's wife in a small country church. She had the respect and confidence of all the community."

Y., also for awhile at Lane Seminary, Cincinnati; graduated from Oberlin Seminary 1839; ordained to Congregational ministry at Bainbridge, O., Oct. 29, 1840. He preached at Claridon and Geneva, O., and Randolph, Pa., 1840-42; then in Wisconsin as follows: Wauwatosa and Granville 1842-43, Lisbon and Pewaukee 1843-44, Raymond and Paris 1846-47, Oshkosh 1847, Rosendale 1848-51, Westfield 1852-57, and at same place again 1863-67; West Hawley, Mass., 1857-58, installed at Middlefield, Mass., May 11, 1859 and dismissed May 19, 1863; De Sota, Wis., 1867-70, Augusta, Wis., 1870-71; then in So. He may also have preached at some other places, and some of the above pastorates overlapped, especially in So. Dakota. He was a pioneer home missionary in the territories of Wisconsin and Dakota, conscientious and faithful in all his work, and enduring much hardship on the frontier. He was deeply interested in the anti-slavery and temperance reforms, and he earnestly contended for the beliefs and ideals that he had learned in New England and at Oberlin. He m. (1) March 20, 1840, at Oberlin, by President Finney, Nancy Daggett; m. (2) at St. Paul, Oct. 12, 1882, Mrs. Hannah Disbrow, dau. of Miner and Lydia (Sherman) Scofield.

GENERATION III—DAGGETT LINE.

3. NANCY DAGGETT, b. at Seekonk, Sept. 2, 1811; d. at Richland, So. Dak., Aug. 25, 1876. She was the tenth of eleven children, all of whom lived to adult age, and all but the youngest to be over sixty. At the age of three she lost both parents, and hence spent most of her childhood at North Attleboro, learning the millinery trade and working at it at Lonsdale, R. Is. She was converted early and at once became an active member of the Episcopal church. Feeling the need of an education she sold out her business and went, about 1834, against the advice of friends, to Oberlin, seven or eight hundred miles distant. Oberlin was then a small school, scarcely a year old, in the wilderness of the far west. Her health was so poor that she took only two years of the course, teaching a colored school one year at Columbus, O. She entered heartily into the ideas and movements for which Oberlin stood, especially the anti-slavery reform. Once she carried a negro babe, well covered, as though it was her own, followed by the babe's mother acting as nurse, in order to get them to freedom. March 20, 1880, she married Rev. Lewis Bridgman, whom she had met at Oberlin, and with whom she shared the many trials of frontier home missionary work on his many fields in the territories, and later the states, of Wisconsin and So. Dakota. She was an active worker in church and Sunday School until a fit of sickness brought on a deafness which cut her off from many fields of usefulness. In Wisconsin there were Indians living near their home, to whom she was a good friend, often giving them things from the garden. Hence they would not steal from her. She made her last visit East in 1870-71, visiting her daughters at Oberlin and spending considerable time with her friends in New England. Returning just after the great Chicago fire, she had her pocket picked in Chicago, losing her ticket and nearly all her money.

In Aug., 1876, she came from their ranch home near Centerville to her daughter's at Richland, So. Dak., to meet her other daughter, Mrs. R. T. Cross, and her family, who were moving to Colorado. She was taken sick and died the night they reached Richland, unconscious when they came. She was buried in the open prairie grave yard, where three weeks later her grandson, Charles Finney Cross, was laid by her side, and where her husband was buried in 1894. She was a devoted wife and mother, an earnest reformer, a friend of the poor and down-trodden, a faithful home missionary, a brave pioneer, a conscientious and humble follower of Jesus Christ.

GENERATION IV—GREAT-GRANDPARENTS.

4 and 5. THEODORE CROSS, b. Methuen, near Lawrence, Sunday, Aug. 25, 1765; d. near Antwerp, N. Y., April 28, 1833, and bur. at Antwerp; millwright and farmer; lived at Weare, N. H., where nine children were born, and three or four years at Goffstown, N. H., where Gorham was born. In 1818 he went to Jefferson Co., in northern New York, and made in the wilderness a home for his family at Pogueland, town of Philadelphia, three miles south of Antwerp. To that home in 1820 he brought his family, except the eldest children. When fifteen years old he greatly desired to join the Revolutionary Army, but his mother objected, as she already had in that army several sons, step-sons and brothers. He joined the Bradford Congregational church in 1791. That he was a deeply religious man appears from a long letter written to his wife from Jefferson Co. in Dec., 1818, about one-half of which is devoted to religion and theology. See letter in Appendix K. Thirteen days he called quick time for a letter to reach northern New York from New Hampshire. He and his sons cleared the primitive forest, getting a little ready cash by burning the logs and making potash. He finally lost the farm, not being able to meet payments. In 1790 he married, at Rowley, SUSANNAH JACKMAN, b. March 27, 1769; d. Sept. 29, 1848, and bur. at Antwerp, N. Y., beside her husband and mother. When fourteen years old she was at the funeral of her great-grandfather, CAPT. TIMOTHY JACKMAN. The sermon which her son Gorham preached about her and her ancestors is in possession of the heirs of Capt. Judson N. Cross. (For children of Theodore and Susannah Cross see end of this section, where all their descendants are given.)

My theory is that Lydia ———, wife of Eleazar Burbank, was daughter of Jonathan and Hannah (Garfield) Jackson of Bradford (Rowley). He probably married in that town. In the Bradford Vital Records I find Lydia Jackson most likely to be the Lydia. She was born Aug. 4, 1686. Eliezar's widow d. June 26, 1771, in her 87th year, according to her tombstone. A mistake of one year or so might easily have occurred. Tombstones are not infallible. Moreover at least three of Eliezar and Lydia's children had names of Lydia Jackson's brothers and sisters—Sarah, Daniel and Nathan, or Nathaniel. (See Essex Inst., Vol. 21, p. 194.)

Jonathan Jackson m. Dec. 6, 1681, Hannah Garfield, prob. of Watertown; to Sudbury chh. 1711. Children: Jonathan, Hannah, Lydia, b. Aug. 4, 1686, Mary or Margaret, Jonathan, Sarah, Samuel, Daniel, Nathan and Joseph. Jonathan's father was Nicholas Jackson of Rowley; m. (1) May, 1646, Sarah Riley, prob. sister of Henry. She d. Aug., 1655; m. (2) Dec. 9, 1656, Elizabeth, wid. of Hugh Chapin. By Sarah he had Lydia, b. April 23, 1647, m. 1668, Tobias Coleman; Samuel, b. March 23, 1649; Jonathan, b. July 15, 1650; m. Hannah Garfield; Caleb, b. Feb. 25, 1652; m. Elizabeth Hew?

Hannah Garfield, who m. Jonathan Jackson above, was, perhaps, dau. of Samuel and Mary (Benfield) Garfield. Samuel's father was Edward Garfield. (See Bond's Watertown Genealogies.) Pres. Garfield was descended from this family—*Edward*¹, *Benjamin*², *Thomas*³, *Thomas*⁴, *Solomon*⁵, *Thomas*⁶, *Abraham*⁷, Pres. *James Abram*⁸.

L. 112, is not given, but when his father died he was adopted by his uncle Theodore, of whom he learned the hatter's trade. A deed from Theodore to John has the heading "My son," but in the deed it is "My nephew." A deed in 1713 from John to John speaks of deed from "my uncle Atkinson late of Boston." Theodore d. 1701. John named his first three sons John, Thomas and Theodore, names of self, father and uncle, if our theory is correct. One of my correspondents gives John as son of Henry Atkinson. There is some uncertainty about the matter. GENERATION IV—GREAT-GRANDPARENTS.

4 and 5. SAMUEL MURDOCK, b. March 10, 1770, at Weston; d. March 9, 1857, in Townshend, Vt., aged 87; came to Vt. with parents; six years old when his father died in the army, and his mother the same year; was brought up by Gen. Fletcher, who lived half way between Townshend and West Townshend, and who, when Samuel was 21, gave him 120 acres. He began clearing it alone. The sheriff, Col. Jay, came along and said: "You'll have a hard time here all alone; you need a wife. I know a girl who would be just the right one—Lois Temple. She is at my house; come Sunday and get acquainted." He went. They lived and died on that farm on Murdock mountain, in the extreme southeast corner of Townshend, Vt. There was no death in the family for over 60 years. His cousin, Jesse Murdock, lived near him and married Selina Taft, sister of Peter Rawson Taft, the grandfather of Pres. Taft. Samuel Murdock and wife, Joseph Temple and wife, are buried in the cemetery between the old Murdock farm and Newfane, Vt. The old farm is now a pasture, and in 1906 the author found trees 40 feet high growing out of the cellar of the old home.

The Second Baptist church of Townshend, located at Townshend village, was organized June 5, 1827. The church records say that Samuel Murdock joined by letter Nov. 15, 1828, and d. March 7, 1857; also at same date Louisa (Lois) Murdock, who d. May 20, 1858. They lived in school dist. No. 5, which was divided in 1868 and annexed to 4, 6 and 8. There was once a large school there; no school is needed now. It is about three miles from the old Murdock farm to Townshend village, down a long, steep and beautiful mountain road.

The name was variously spelled Mordock, Moredock, Moredeck, Murder, Murdoach, Murdoc, Murdoch, Murduc, Muredock, Murduch, Murloch, and Murdock.

He m. Dec. 1795, LOIS TEMPLE, b. Jan. 1, 1775, in Dummerston, Vt.; d. May 29, 1858, on the old farm. For list of 8 chil., see Descendants of Samuel Murdock, at end of Murdock Line.

He and son Oliver and 51 others signed an agreement binding themselves to maintain and disseminate the principles of American liberty, and adopted the resolutions adopted by the Continental Congress in Sept. and Oct. 1774. He was a proprietor in Townshend, Vt., where he had a log house just over the river. His first five children, and perhaps six, were born at Weston, now called Warren. In 1811 he deeded the farm to his son Joseph, he to give dau. Lois $50 and a cow, and something to the other children, adding: "It being the wish of an affectionate parent that their children may continue to live in love and friendship when he shall be no more." He was wounded in the skirmish at Westminster, Vt., March 13, 1775, knocked down and supposed to be dead; skull fractured on left side; carried scar through life. A quart pewter basin in which he carried food was struck twice and dented by bullets, and was kept as a relic in the family until a wily peddler crushed it in his hand and then bought it for a trifle. (See Hist. of Eastern Vermont, p. 234.) He was private in Capt. Josiah Fish's comp. of Samuel Fletcher's battalion from beginning of campaign of 1781 to June 30; rec'd £ 5-1-4; also served from July 1 to Nov. 18, 1781, under same commander and received £ 9-4; served 138 days in 1781.

"When young for liberty he fought;
A scar was on his brow;
He met the foe and with single hand
Twice broke the sword in two."

From poem by Sophia Murdock Cross.

When an old man he saw some strangers admiring the great elms in front of his house. He said, as per poem just quoted:

"Why gaze ye so, said the aged man,
Upon that stately tree?
When I was young I carried it,
And with it other three."

When he settled in the wilderness of Vermont he walked from Worcester, bringing his few possessions in a pack on his shoulders. His first work was to cut a large hollow basswood tree for a place to sleep in, building a fire near it at night to keep off the wild beasts. Once, when passing through the woods a violent storm began to blow down trees. He hurried on and soon saw the forest leveled behind him. He m. (1) Elizabeth Wilder and had two

See description of house and massacre in Sheldon's Hist. of Deerfield. He lived there at time of massacre by French and Indians, Feb. 29, 1704. His wife and baby were killed then; also his son-in-law and wife's brother, and four of his own children were captured and taken to Canada. John was second in command of garrison. He and John Wells went to Boston the next fall for leave to go to Canada after the captives. John Livingstone of Albany offered to guide them for £100. Gov. Dudley and the Council approved. The three Johns started Dec. 20; went over Hoosick Mountain to Albany, then north 300 miles, sleeping out nights, using snow-shoes, etc. He heard that his children were alive, but the Jesuits and Indians opposed his plans and he returned with only five captives. He went again the next winter and returned to Boston by ship with 44 captives, leaving 57, who came later on the "Hope," which was sent for them. He secured the release of 113 in all. He was given 300 acres of land for his services. He afterwards moved to Hartford;

The old oak door referred to above is perhaps the most interesting relic in the museum at Deerfield. It is thus referred to in the History of Deerfield, Vol. I, p. 414: "Sacred historic door! Door of the ark of the covenant wert thou to our fathers in the olden time. Built of no costly material, thy posts were not inlaid with shell; no gold adorns thy panels. Heart of oak art thou! fit type of the heroes who framed thee; sturdy and strong in their defence as they in their defence of liberty, ye yielded never! More to us than Grecian sculpture are thy carvings by Indian tomahawk, and thy wrought spike more precious than bosses of gold and silver."

There were 140 passengers. They formed a church at Plymouth the day before sailing. During the journey of 70 days the Word of God was preached or expounded every day. When they landed each one offered a silent prayer of thanksgiving and they sang, "Thou, Lord, hast been our sure defense." They called the place Dorchester, as several of them had come from Dorchester, Eng. They arrived May 30. A month later the rest of the fleet came to Salem and settled at Boston. Seventeen ships came that year, bringing 1500 settlers. In 1635 sixty men, women and children went with Rev. John Warham to Windsor, Ct., which they at first called Dorchester. They endured great hardships in the journey of fourteen days through the woods. In 1636 those who were left organized a new church, which is now the First chh. (Unitarian) of Boston, of which Dorchester is a part. In 1695 another chh. was formed and in 1696 went to So. Carolina and then settled at Midway, Ga., a famous chh., mother of many eminent men. The Dorchester migration from Eng. in the "Mary and John" stands next in interest to the Plymouth migration in the Mayflower ten years earlier.

Northampton was the chief center of Bridgman ancestors, while the Daggett ancestors were found largely in southeastern Massachusetts, especially in Bristol Co. The following ancestors, and probably some others, were deputies to the General Court or Representatives, some of them for many terms:

Cross Line—Richard Swan, Robert Swan, Nicholas Noyes.

F. ANCESTRAL MOTTOES.

The author of this book is not specially interested in Heraldry. He has pictures of the coats of arms of some thirty ancestral families, but he has not deemed it best to put them into this book. Some of the family mottoes, however, are of interest and are here given in English, not in the original Latin. They are well worthy of being taken as mottoes by the present and future generations.

Coffin: "I flourish in the tempest."

Sutton: "Live to live."

Hewitt: "Seek nothing beyond your sphere."

Warner: "We are not born for ourselves alone."

Murdock: "I do good to everyone."

Sheldon: "To suffer is best."

Symonds: "Plain and neat."

Swan: "Let the name be a glory."

Temple: "I shall flourish while you remain."

G. ROYAL ANCESTRY.

It is one thing to be descended from royalty, as most of us probably are if our ancestors came from England, Scotland, Ireland, or Wales; it is another thing to be able to trace our line directly back, through all connecting links, to some famous king of old. There is no merit in royal descent. Royal blood is no better than the blood of the common people; often it is not so good. But there is an advantage which the genealogist prizes. The royal families of Europe are all inter-related and their pedigrees are carefully kept and can be found in many books, so that if once you can trace your line back to some royal family, you can easily find a host of ancestors, and a greater host of very great uncles and aunts. From a dozen or more pedigrees of royal lines which the author has prepared, one only is given here as a sample, the one which shows Richard Lyman's royal ancestry, his daughter Sarah marrying James Bridgman, ancestor of the American Bridgmans. (See B. L. 66 and 132; also see Lyman Genealogy.)

From Cerdic, King of West Saxons, 519 A. D., came Alcmmund, King of Kent, from whom came

1. Egbert the Great, K. 802-839 A. D.
2. Ethelwolf, K. 839-858.
3. Alfred the Great, K. 871-901, m. Elstwitha.
4. Edward the Elder, K. 901-924, m. Edsiva.
5. Princess Edgina, m. Henry III.
6. Hubert, Count of Vermandois, m. Adelheld.
7. Lady Adela de Vermandois, m. Hugh Magnus, son of Henry I, King of France.
8. Lady Isabel de Vermandois, m. Robert de Beaumont, Earl of Leicester.
9. Robert, Earl of Leicester and Chief Justice of Eng.; d. 1168.
10. Robert, Earl of Leicester; d. 1196; m. Lady Petronella de Grent.
11. Lady Margaret de Bellamont, m. Saier de Quincy, one of the 25 Magna Charta Barons.
12. Roger, Earl of Winchester, m. Lady Helen, dau. of Alan, Lord of Galloway.
13. Lady Elizabeth de Quincy, m. Baron Cumyn.
14. Lady Agnes Cumyn, m. Gilbert, Baron de Umfraville.
15. Gilbert, Earl of Angus, m. 1243 Matilda, Countess of Angus.

17. Sir Thomas de Umfraville, m. Lady Joane de Rodan.
18. Sir Thomas de Umfraville, m. Lady Agnes.

24. John Lyman, d. 1589; m. Margaret, dau. of William Girard.
25. Henry Lyman of High Ongar.
26. Richard Lyman, the immigrant, m. Sarah, dau. of Roger Osborne. See B. L. 132.
27. Sarah Lyman, m. James Bridgman.
28. John Bridgman, m. Mary Sheldon.
29. Deliverance Bridgman m. Joanna Taylor.

30. Noah Bridgman m. Mchitable Warner.
31. Noah Bridgman m. Mercy Clark.
32. Noah Bridgman m. Asenath Judd.
33. Lewis Bridgman m. Nancy Daggett.
34. Emma A. Bridgman m Roselle T. Cross.
35. Judson L. Cross m. Florence E. Isham.
36. Margaret I. and Elizabeth M. Cross.

Other pedigrees that connect with this one show that the Bridgmans are descended from old Saxon Kings going back to Hengst, 434 A. D., to Robert the Strong of France, Hugh the Grand, Hugh Capet, Robert the Pious, Henry I, also to many Scotch Kings, as Kenneth McAlpine, Malcom I, Duncan I, Donald Barr, Malcolm III, etc.; also to Pepin of Herestal, of France; Charles Martel, Charlemagne, Louis the Gentle, etc.; to William the Conqueror, to Robert the Devil, or the Magnificent, to Rollo the Dane, and many Danish and Swedish kings, and to various kings, emperors, czars, etc., in Germany, Russia, Italy and Turkey, to say nothing of a host of earls, counts, nobles, etc. If you once get into one of those royal families you have to accept them all as ancestors and relatives, good and bad alike.

H. The author has seen, in different books, the wills of a goodly number of his children's ancestors. One of them will answer for all the rest. It is the will of John Cross (See C. L. 10), who died 1746, grandfather of Theodore Cross. It is a good illustration of the wills of that century, and is given without change of spelling, capitals, etc.

I. INVENTORY OF ISRAEL DAGGETT.

The author has in his possession the original of the following inventory taken during the Rev. War. It is a good illustration, not only of the spelling of that time, but also of the personal and household possessions of a family in medium circumstances in those times: Israel Daggett (D. L. 10) was born 1704; d. 1777.

A GENEALOGICAL PUZZLE.

Four persons, and perhaps more, have worked for years on a certain problem in Genealogy. Experts have been hired to straighten the matter out, but the results have not been satisfactory, except on minor points. I will state the problem with the theory adopted in this book. (See C. L. 18), and the arguments pro and con. I do so hoping that some one who reads this article may be able to furnish facts that will either disprove the theory, or else firmly establish it. It will also illustrate the difficulty of some genealogical problems, which in their way, are as good for mental discipline as hard problems in mathematics.

The problem concerns the Cross family of Essex Co., Mass. Near Methuen, on the Merrimack, is the old Cross homestead, now in the suburbs of the city of Lawrence. The original house, built about 1670, has been enlarged and much improved. Eight generations of Crosses have lived there. The family tradition is that the first Cross proprietor bought of the Indians as much land as he could travel around from morning until night, paying for it in cloth.

Two of the boys born, according to tradition, on that place were William Cross and John Cross. (See C. L. 10.) William Cross married Mary Favoli April 9, 1706. Her ancestry is not known. One of his descendants is Mr. A. E. Goodman of Vancouver, B. C., who has been greatly interested in solving the Cross problem. Another was William Parker Cross, who died on the old homestead in 1882, and whose widow, Lerona (French) Cross, still lives there, and has labored for years most zealously on the Cross problem.

William Cross aforesaid had a brother John, and no other brother or sister so far as known. John was married April 15, 1708, to Sarah Peacock. One of his descendants, through John, Theodore and Rev. Gorham, was the late Capt. Judson N. Cross of Minneapolis, who also labored long on this problem. His brother, who writes this article, is still at work upon it.

As to the descendants of William and John there is no special problem. The difficulty lies back of them in the seventeenth century. Who were their parents and their grandparents? The theory which Mrs. L. F. Cross believes in most confidently, and which I have adopted, provisionally, is that the parents of William and John were John Cross and his wife Ruth, daughter of Robert Swan (Richard¹), and that this John Cross was the son of Robert Cross of Ipswich and his wife Ann, or Hannah, Cross, daughter of Stephen Jordan. Robert Cross came in the "Mary and John" 1634. He was born 1613, was in the Pequot War, and married before 1636. No complete list of his children has been found. The known list given in C. L. 34, (which see), is gathered from different sources. It gives seven children between 1636 and 1658 or later. The known dates of birth are 1636, 1641-2, 1646-7, 1658. Besides these, two daughters were married in 1664 and 1675, born, perhaps in 1643 and 1654. There is room for at least ten children between 1636 and 1658. In those days children came at pretty regular intervals. Our theory requires two more sons, John, the first Methuen settler (not John of Ipswich, who surveyed Methuen, and died about 1650, leaving only a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Hammond) and George, who went to Newbury.

There are the following reasons for the second part of our theory, viz.—that the father of William and John was John, and that he was the son of Robert of Ipswich.

First—For a very long time there has been a family tradition that the first Methuen Cross settler was John, and that his sons, William and John, were born on the old homestead, and that he had a brother George who went to Newbury. Eliza Cross, who died in 1887 at the age of ninety-seven, had it from her father William, who died aged one hundred years and seven months, having been born in 1742, a grandson of our first William. She also had it from her brother Jeremy, a genealogist and a prominent Masonic lecturer and writer. It was part of the tradition that John and George were sons of Robert Cross, Sen., and that they came from the Charleuge Crosses in Somersetshire, Eng., to which family belonged the famous warrior, Sir Robert Cross, who was knighted by Queen Elizabeth. So strong was this traditional belief that Gen. Ralph Cross of Revolutionary fame had Sir Robert Cross's coat of arms painted. Rev. W. R. Bell, rector at Charleuge, has spent several years studying the Cross records, and he believes that our Crosses came from the Charleuge family.

Second—One of the Prebble genealogists says that George Cross was probably descended from Robert of Ipswich, while another Prebble book says positively that he was thus descended. The Cross and Prebble families intermarried.

Third—On page 87 of "Ipswich in the Massachusetts Bay Colony 1633-1700" is a list of freemen for 1678. These four names stand together: George Cross, Ralph Cross, Robert Cross, Stephen Cross. We know that the last three were brothers. Probably George was another brother. John's name is not in the list, as he is supposed to have died several years before, leaving only two children, and had lived in Methuen. If the tradition is true that George and John were brothers, then John was a son of Robert Cross, Sen.

Fourth—Stephen Cross of Newburyport, went to Oswego on Lake Ontario in 1756, where he and others were taken prisoners by the French. He kept a journal in which he speaks of his "relative," Moses Cross, as being with him. This Moses was born April 3, 1716, son of John and Sarah (Peacock) Cross, which indicates a relationship between the Methuen and Newburyport Crosses. Probably they were second cousins.

Opposed to this theory are the following reasons:

First—There is no record, so far as known, that Robert Cross of Ipswich had a son John or a son George. But the Ipswich records of that time seem to have been lost, perhaps in a fire, and such children as we do know that Robert, Sen., had we gather from various sources. There is room for two or three more.

Second—If the father of William and John was John he would be called John, Sen., and there is no such record of him. But according to our theory he died when his son John was only a baby, and there would be no need then of calling him John, Sen.

It would seem that the weight of evidence was in favor of the second part of our theory. The first part of our theory is that the mother of William and John, and wife of their father John, was Ruth, daughter of Robert Swan, Sen., son of Richard Swan, the immigrant.

First—In the city clerk's office of Haverhill, Vol. III, p. 44, is a record that John Hartshorn married Ruth Swan Sept. 19, 1672. Their children from 1673 to 1688 were: John, Ruth, Jonathan, Susannah, Elizabeth, Abigail, Martha. The record says that Ruth, the wife, died of smallpox Dec. 12, 1690. Couple with this a record which Mrs. L. F. Cross is sure that she saw in some book, the name of which she omitted to take and cannot recall, but she thinks it was printed in 1890, which says that John Cross married Ruth Swan, who died of smallpox Dec. 12, 1690. The supposition is that she married John Cross first, that he soon died, leaving her with the two small children—William and John—and that when she married John Hartshorn her maiden name was inadvertently given, and that the youngest child, John, was brought up by her brother, Robert Swan Jr.

Second—This last view is confirmed by the fact that on April 28, 1700, Robert Swan Jr., deeded to John Cross, brother of William, a parcel of land, not for a money consideration, but "for ye love that I have for and do bear to my cousin or nephew, John Cross." Cousin was then sometimes used in the sense of nephew. Eight days before he had deeded a similar parcel of land to William Cross without any such endearing terms, but for £20 cash.

Third—That Robert Swan Sen., had a daughter Ruth, sister of Robert Swan Jr., is shown by the Haverhill record of the distribution in 1725 of the lands of Robert Swan Sen. In the list of children sharing is the expression "to such as represent Ruth Swan, alias Hartshorn." She herself had been dead thirty-five years.

Fourth—Possibly a reason might be given based on the fact that the Cross and Swan farms adjoined each other. The proximity of farms is sometimes the cause and sometimes the effect of a wedding between two families.

But there are reasons against this part of our theory:

First—The Haverhill record says that John Hartshorn married Ruth Swan, not Ruth Cross, or the widow of John Cross. Such mistakes, however, were sometimes made, and are now, when the first marriage was of short duration.

Second—By Ruth's second marriage she had a son, Jonathan Hartshorn, who is supposed to be the one who in 1729 married Sarah Cross, daughter of Ruth's son John Cross, by her first husband. That is, Jonathan Hartshorn married his half brother's daughter, his halfniece, an unusual if not an illegal marriage. But it may have been another Jonathan Hartshorn, perhaps a son, who then would have married simply a half cousin. This seems more probable when we find that there was a difference of thirty-two years in their ages.

Third—According to our theory William and John were born previous to Ruth's marriage in 1672, which would make them somewhere about thirty-six years old when they were married, one in 1706 and one in 1708, rather an advanced age for marrying in those times, or even in these times. Of course it is possible, and it is also possible that both had been previously married.

Fourth—In the Haverhill list of the children of Robert Swan Sen., no Ruth is given. Elizabeth is given as born in 1653, and others in 1655, 1657, 1658, 1660, 1663, 1666, 1668, 1670, 1672, 1674, 1676. Ruth must come before all these or she would not be old enough to be a widow with two children in 1672. The Acie Genealogy in the Essex Antiquarian says that Robert Swan and Elizabeth Acie were married in 1652, but some one may have inferred that they were married then because the first child recorded in Haverhill was born in 1653, as has been done in numerous cases recorded in this book. The Haverhill record does not give the date of their marriage. The history of Stonington, Conn., under the Swan family says that they were both in Rowley when married, that they tarried awhile in Andover, and went to Haverhill as early as 1650. The history of Haverhill says that he came to Haverhill in 1647. This would surely give room for Ruth as the eldest child. Why her name was not recorded we do not know, unless it was because the town was very new and unorganized.

This then is our hard problem, our criss-cross puzzle. Can any one change, prove, or disprove enough of the above statements to confirm our theory, or cause us to abandon it. The problem is worthy of a genealogist's highest skill and best efforts.

AN OLD TIME LETTER.

LeRayville (N. Y.) December 15th, 1818.

Ever Loving wife,

With a rejoicing heart I sit down this night at 10 o'clock to write to one who lies so near my heart to inform you that your letter arrived at LeRay's office the 12th inst, and it found me, according to your wish, in good health for me, and I ascribe it to the goodness and mercy of an unchanging God who is every where present. 'Tis he that preserves us at all times and in all places, and I rejoice that through his indulging goodness your letter brought the good news of your good state of health, and that those that were unwell were better, and it is my desire and prayer to Him, (to) whom I ever wish to commit the care and keeping of you and myself, that he would perfect his goodness and grant that you may be kept in good health, that health, peace and plenty may be your happy lot. But above all I sincerely wish that your soul may be in health and prosperity, that you may seek that better part which cannot be taken from you, that you would seek and find yourselves on that happy ground which no earthly power can move. Never forget that voice from heaven: "Be ye also ready." I am at a considerable distance from home. I know not whether I shall be privileged to see your faces again in this world, therefore it is my prayer to God that he would grant that we may meet in a better world, that he would save us from our sins, that he would save us from an heart of unbelief, that he would enable us to seek him with all our heart, that we may put our trust in him at all times, that we may become willing to be saved by his sovereign grace and in his own way. Let us remember that the Lord loves us not for any work which we do, but of his own mercy we might go out of ourselves and depend entirely upon the righteousness of Christ. We must see that all those graces have an indwelling in our hearts, that to which is added a blessing. If our sins and the corruptions of our hearts worketh in us and we are troubled therewith it is but a struggling gasp for life. If our heart condemn us God is greater than all and knoweth all things what is best for us. He has commanded us to put our trust in him, for blessed is he that putteth his trust in the Lord. Therefore let us do his commands in the first and second table, love his law, love his word and love his character, be submissive to his will, hope in his mercy till death.

My dear wife you hoped that I would come home as soon as I could make it convenient, for you all wanted to see me. I am glad that you all want to see me. I make no doubt of it. I want to see all of you, every one, to find how you feel toward your poor, unworthy husband and father. If I could be any service to you it would be worth a while for me to come scraping over those rocks. However, I do not value that if I could be permitted to come and see those whom I love as myself. Through a good providence, good fortune and prosperity, I hope I shall be able to fulfill your desire by the last of January. I expect to work on the mill three weeks longer after this week and then prepare to come home. Cleaveland said if he and Christopher did come out they should be here by New Year's. However I do not look for them much, though I wish it might take place. I want them to see the country, for I am persuaded they would like—. However if they do come they will start before this gets to Weare, though your letter came in 13 days after you wrote and if this could go so soon they might come and get here soon enough to go back with me. Well if (they do) not come now I want to have Cleaveland and John and one of their sisters come by the first of March, if they are alive and have their health so that they can, for I have looked out the two best lots of land that I know of in LeRay, one beside Brother Jackman's 130 acres, another about seven miles from brother's near LeRayville. In the neighborhood of this lot 22 families and men have taken up land within a short time. Eight or ten houses have been put up within three months and most all of them (have) families in them and not a spear of grass or grain growing. There are two considerable streams of water running through this lot, big enough for mills, and room enough for saw mill, grist mill, fulling mill, carding machine, all separate. It appears to me that if we all live and have our health and prosper that we can not do better than begin to clear land next season. One good hand can clear ten acres in one summer season. Therefore if one or two of you would come and take care and see to the business I would lay out to him one or two good hands that were used to clearing land in this country, for there is quite a knack in clearing land here, and to begin as soon as the snow was off the ground. There might be grain raised the first season. I shall lay out to have some boards on the ground for a hut. But what I say may appear a fable to you, but though a fool I will assure you I am in earnest, and while I have my health and strength continued to me I shall strive to prosecute the business as fast and far as possible, and if you think it one of my foolish plans pray let it not hurt your affections towards me, for I know not what is for me, whether the Lord will be pleased to prosper me here in this country or not, but I am encouraged to think there is a prospect. I think if we were all here we might get along as well as others that came poor. So I must leave it to your discretion.

I might add a few lines by way of commitment. I might sincerely commend you to God and to his pure word of grace, wishing and praying that these lines may find you all well. My best love to wife, sons and daughters. My love to all inquiring friends. Keep my intentions private. So no more at present, from your husband and father.

Sincerely

Theodore Cross
(to) Susannah Cross.

Brother Jackman, Brother Jones and sisters and cousins were well the eighth day of December. Sukey I will hand your letter to Aunt in a few days. Friday evening, will go into the office Saturday. T. C.

The above letter was addressed on back of same sheet (no envelopes then) to "Theodore Cross in Weare in New Hampshire State County of Hillsborough." The postage was 18 3-4 cents. Only slight changes have been made in copying it. As indicated by words on the margin, it was written on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

THE OLD CROSS HOMESTEAD.

(Methuen, Mass.)By Judson N. Cross.

There's a homestead down East,
On the Merrimack River,
Which the Crosses at least
Should remember forever.

There the pioneer laid
The foundation so lasting.
His descendants have staid,
Through feasting and fasting,

In the house which he built,
On the banks of that water,
When, in rude western cult,
He'd be known as a "squatter."

'Twas a beautiful place
Where our ancestor halted;
There the Indian race
The great Spirit exalted.

On the hills in relief,
Just beyond the swift river,
Stood the Indian chief
With his bow and his quiver.

But his arrows were bound,
For his word he had plighted,
That he'd give all the ground
Which the white man had sighted

When he strode round the grant,
From the morn till the gloaming,
While the sun went aslant,
And the chief went a roaming.

So the chief put his hand
To the parchment, as giver
Of that fair plat of land
On the Merrimack River.

There the Crosses have dwelt
In the home that was planted,
As they always have felt,
On the land the chief granted.

May the tall stately elm,
Which has guarded the threshold,
No tempest o'erwhelm
While a Cross owns the freehold.

MY CHILDHOOD'S HOME.

By Mrs. Amelia S. (Cross) Wilkinson.

My childhood's home, how fair it seems,
As oft I visit it in dreams!
The daisied meadow spread before
The well remembered western door,
Where merrily of old we played
Beneath the arching sumach's shade,
Where once our feet passed to and fro
O'er threshold old and steps below.
Again we sit in converse sweet
And look beyond the village street,
Beyond the river, deep and still,
To where the sunset splendors shine
Along the wide horizon line.
O king of all the country side,
Thou grand old elm, outstretching wide!
When homeward bound we watch for thee,
How glad our hearts when first we see
Thy royal head, majestic tree!
For fifty years we've watched thee grow,
Through fifty winters' sleet and snow.
Through fifty summers' leafage green,
Through storm and sunshine have we seen
Thy giant trunk, unmoved, serene,
While traced against the deep blue sky,
Thy thousand branches wave on high.
Far up above all common trees
They float and sway in every breeze.
Long years ago, thou dear old tree,

A fearful danger threatened thee,
 The axe upheld to lay thee low;
 Our father stayed the fatal blow.
 Then let your coolest shadows play
 Whene'er his footsteps pass your way,
 A welcome to your royal tent,
 A benediction downward sent,
 For thou and he are comrades tried;
 We look on both with love and pride.

THE OLD CROSS ELM.

By R. T. Cross.

My sister and a friend have written each a lay,
 About a dear old elm that stands beside the way.
 Their lines I love to read; they give me pure delight,
 As visions of that tree arise upon my sight.

Another lay I write; another song I sing;
 Another tribute I to that old elm do bring,
 So sister, friend and I a triune crown do lay
 Upon the triune elm that reigns across the way.

Beneath its shade there stands, e'en to this very day,
 The house where I was born, the yard where I did play.
 Of all the trees in all the years beheld by me,
 That tree was first, and first it stands in memory.

Beside the quiet street and on a sloping hill,
 At edge of lovely village that still is called Richville,
 It stays content for aye; nor west nor south it roams
 To find the seven Crosses in distant, scattered homes.

But when a homesick feeling draws us there once more,
 And neither of our parents awaits us at the door,
 Their welcome thou dost give in every limb and leaf,
 A living monument, a fragrant, loving sheaf.

Their memory thou dost keep, enshrined in living green;
 Their praises thou dost sing, an endless, breezy pean.
 The Old Cross Elm thou'rt called, and Trinity Elm as well,
 And still as years go by, the neighbors love to tell

How dear old "Father Cross," some scores of years ago,
 Did pay ten dollars down, to stay the axman's blow,
 And saved the life for generations yet to be,
 Of children's friend and neighbor's pride, the old elm tree.

When I was young the moaning winds that sighed through thee,
 Did stir within my soul strange thoughts of mystery.
 To their weird sighs in darksome night I listened long,
 As through my soul the thoughts of God did thickly thong.

And still thou guardest well the house where I was born;
 And still thy shadows fall across the road so worn,
 Where strangers come and go, and barefoot boys still play,
 And every spring doth deck the yards with foliage gay.

The man who paid his gold to save thy noble life,
 The angel one who walked with him, his loving wife,
 Who gave us each our life, and gave at greater cost,—
 Their bodies sleep for aye—their lives can ne'er be lost.

When thou, old tree, art dead, and turned to soil once more,
 Their souls in pristine youth shall live forevermore.
 A memory thou shalt be, a thought from out the past;
 An endless life is theirs, in God's own hand held fast.

By precious blood of Christ, so gladly by him paid,
 Redeemed were they both, and in his image made.
 A few more years of life with gold were bought for thee;
 Exhaustless life is theirs beside the crystal sea.

The following poem, written in 1870, by Mrs. Sophia Murdock Cross, refers to her grandfather, Joseph Temple, a soldier of the Revolution. See M. L. 8.

MY GRANDFATHER.

An old man stood in an open door
 To watch the passersby;
 Smooth and worn had grown his floor,
 And dim had grown his eye.

When young for Liberty he fought;
 A scar was on his brow;
 He met the foe and with single hand
 Twice broke their sword in two.

A giant tree of noble grade
 Across the way was growing;
 To slack the thirst, beneath its shade,
 Of men and beast, a spring was flowing.

When winter snows were past
 Each spring a robin came and sung;
 Upon its boughs it made its nest,
 And there it reared its young.

"Why gaze ye so," said the aged man,
 "Upon that stately tree?
 When I was young I carried that,
 And with it other three."

One holiday they made a bee
 To cut the old Elm down;
 It measured seven feet across
 And twenty feet around.

Naught but the stump remains to tell
 Where once the old tree staid,
 And naught but the marble cold
 To mark where the old man's laid.

MY REMOTE ANCESTOR.

Florence Moulton Mirick.

The other night a stranger came
 To trace our pedigree;
 He took the Bible records all
 And nodded quick with glee.
 His surname was the same as ours,
 And many years had he
 Been fond of poring over books
 Of Genealogy.

This record clears up doubtful points—
 Pure Cambrian stock are we;
 See, in Burke's Peerage traced at length,
 Our glorious family tree.
 Our ancestors were men of note,
 And here's the source you see,
 Coel Codebog, a Briton King,
 262 B. C.

He showed to us our coat of arms—
 A raven with a key,
 A tower, a scutcheon black as night,
 With firebrands, one, two, three.
 "Each point stood for some noble deed
 Of ancestors," said he,
 "And 'tis the crest that's borne today
 By Lords of Anglesey."

But naught care I for Dukes and Earls,
 And all their heraldry;
 That Briton King, he is of far
 More interest to me,
 A-roaming with his mighty club
 Across the plains so free,
 Or going to a Druid feast,
 And dancing on the lea.

Coda,

So here's to you, old Codebog,
 Source of my ancestry,
 You wild and warlike Briton King,
 262 B. C.
 From Merrick Genealogy, page 11.

Part of a poem by Dr. Increase Miles Tarbox, read at Yale Alumni Association in Boston in 1887. Pres. Timothy Dwight of Yale was present See D. L. 108.

"I sing of Timothy Dwight,
 That many-headed man,
 Who first appeared upon these shores
 When Dedham town began.

He trod the Dedham wilds,
 A stirring boy of five,
 But did his part, before he died,
 To stock the family hive.

With six most worthy wives,
 And fourteen children dear,
 He gave the race a vigorous start
 That reaches down to here.

* * * * *

How many Timothy Dwights
 Now live upon the earth,
 Who to the Dedham youngster
 Can surely trace their birth!

How many Timothy Dwights
 The future shall unfold,
 In the dispersion of the tribe,
 Must here be left untold.

But certain 'tis and sure,
That since the race set out
In Dedham wood, The Timothy Dwights
Have always been about."

A CROSS LINEAGE.

If Robert Cross came from the Cross family of Charlinge, Eng., then the following lineage belongs to his descendants:

1. Sir Renulf Cotgreave, Lord of Hargrave Tarvin and Hattenhall, in county of Palatine and Chester, in reign of Henry IV and Henry V (1399-1422), m. Elinor, dau. of Sir Francis Gamville de Mollington.
2. Elinor Cotgreave, m. Sir William Crosse de Charlinge, county of Somerset, and Sutton, Cheshire.
3. William Crosse, Esq., de Charlinge and Sutton, m. Isabelle, dau. of Robert de Holme, Lord de Franmure in county of Palatine and Chester.
4. John Crosse, Esq., of Charlinge, and Sutton, m. Constance. dau. of William Botelar, or Butler, Esq. of Warrington in county of Lancaster.
5. John Crosse, Esq., de Charlinge and Sutton, m. Angard, dau. of Matthew Ellis de Overleigh, near Chester. He was the father of the famous warrior, Sir Robert Cross.

A MAYFLOWER DESCENT.

This book has to do with the Puritans of New England, not the Pilgrims of Plymouth. The effort to trace any line back to the Mayflower has not been successful. It may possibly come sometime through some of our unsolved problems. The nearest we get to it is in William Hilton, who came to Plymouth in 1621. (See C. L. 220.) But Cleaveland R. Cross of Generation I married Ruth A. Savage, and she is of Mayflower descent, as follows:

1. John Alden, 1597-1687, m. 1621, Priscilla Mullens.
2. Ruth Alden, m. 1657, John Bass, 1632-1716.
3. Sarah Bass, 1672-1751, m. 1692, Ephraim Thayer, 1669-1757.
4. Hannah Thayer, 1698 ———, m. 1724, Nathaniel Blanchard, 1701-1765.
5. Nehemiah Blanchard, 1736 ———, m. 1757 or 58, Mary Duesbury Gibson, 1737 ———.
6. Thomazin Blanchard, 1765-1824, m. 1788, Rev. Jeremiah Johnson, 1763-1847.
7. Mary Duesbury Johnson, 1789 ———, m. (1) 1812, Abel Sander-son, who d. 1814; m. (2) 1815, Rev. Robert White, 1795 ———.
8. Rev. John Wesley White, 1826-1889, m. 1849, Harriet Russell Ewer, who d. 1854.

9. Caroline Matilda White, 1851 ———, m. 1877, Frederick Joel Savage.
10. Ruth Adah Savage, 1882 ———, m. 1908, Cleaveland Roselle Cross, 1882 ———.

A GOVERNOR'S LINE

In Generation I No. 4 the Isham line is given of Florence Emily, wife of Judson Lewis Cross. On her mother's side her ancestry goes back to a Colonial governor of Connecticut, Thomas Fitch, as follows:

1. Thomas Fitch of Eng., m. Anna Pew.
2. Thomas Fitch of Norwalk, Ct., came 1638.
3. Thomas Fitch, b. ab. 1671.
4. Thomas Fitch, 1700-1774, governor of Conn. 1754-1766; m. Hannah Hall.
5. Elizabeth Fitch, 1737-1825; m. Andrew Rowland, 1737-1825.
6. Samuel Rowland, 1769-1837.
7. Edward Sherman Rowland, 1812-1882.
8. Mary Rowland, b. 1850; m. Frank Worthington Isham.
9. Florence Emily Isham, m. Rev. Judson Lewis Cross.
